On Tue 7/18, we launched our cannabis equity research service (see Sector Launch report). We will publish thematic/macro reports during the first two months, and then follow with equity stock coverage. A full list of our recent reports is shown at the end of this report.

A SAFE Roadmap

We continue to think, rescheduling, US exchange up listing, and a Cole Memo II (Garland Memo), are bigger catalysts for the US cannabis industry than SAFE. That said, over the next three months we expect no news flows on those other three factors, while SAFE will go through various (positive or negative) key milestones from here to end of November.

If we were drawing out the map, in chronological order, these are the steps (and likely catalysts) to follow,

- Will the Senate Banking Committee mark-up vote be indeed scheduled for the week of Sep 25, or at least before the recess starts on 10/6. Trade journal Marijuana Moment wrote the vote has been scheduled for Wed Sep 27th (but the time of the meeting is "to be determined"). We have not been able to verify this information.
- 2. How will the 11 Republicans in the Senate Banking Committee vote? Of those 11, three are among the eight sponsors/co-sponsors (Cramer, Daines, Lummis). Regarding the rest, as we explain in detail here, we would only count on Thom Tillis (NC) and or JD Vance (OH) to potentially vote in favor; we are rather skeptical the other six would vote for SAFE.
- 3. What changes (and or add-ons) were made to the final bill that will receive a mark-up vote? We understand the final version should be public before the mark-up vote. That said, with 12 Democrats and Independents in the Committee and three Republican cosponsors, the vote should already be 15-8. Or 17-6, if both Sen Tillis and Vance vote yes.
- 4. Senate floor vote scheduled for November? Assuming Sens. Tillis and Vance vote against SAFE during mark-up, the bill would still leave committee with a 15-8 vote (given the three Republican sponsors/so-sponsors, and 12 D+I majority). But a vote scheduling does not necessarily imply passage in the Senate floor (besides the 60 votes to avoid the filibuster, there is always the risk of attempts for further amendments in the Senate floor prior to the final vote. Especially, if this is all about posturing (we hope not, and assume the efforts are genuine).
- 5. We assume Senate Majority Leader, Chuck Schumer, would only bring the bill for a vote if he knows there are 60 votes (unless, again, that this is all just political posturing). As we explain here, if there will be other Republican votes for SAFE, we believe at best they could come from one or both of Missouri's Senators (a state with a thriving rec and med market, and close to 200 licensed dispensaries that would benefit from SAFE), and or

- Libertarian-leaning, Mike Lee from Utah. We are skeptical on the rest, in the current political environment.
- 6. Then if SAFE passes the Senate, we see two paths: a) a prolonged process thru mid 2024 where SAFE is also debated and or voted in the House, or, b) quick passage and House convergence if it is included in a must pass bill by year-end (supposedly, this time around, unlike last year, there has been plenty of debate and revisions through the formal Senate process). Given other priorities in the GOP-controlled House, we do not see SAFE passing, unless it receives overwhelming Senate support (quite unlikely). On the other hand, passage via the Omnibus or NDAA could be speedier and easier House Speaker McCarthy.

Mark-Up Vote Delays

The delays in the mark-up vote could be a good sign – maybe? The Secure and Fair Enforcement (SAFE) Banking Act was jointly filed on 4/26/23, in the House and Senate, with both Democrats and Republicans sponsors. True, it was not the first time it was filed (it was first filed in 2014), but this time it was more of a coordinated effort between the two sides, and, unlike in the past, the bill made progress in the Senate, and for the first time ever, the US Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, held a public hearing on the Bill, and collected public feedback. A mark-up vote is expected to follow; this process (mark-up vote) has been constantly delayed, but we take solace on the fact the that this is a de facto 15-8 vote. Why? There are 12 Democrats and Independents in the committee, and three of the Republicans are sponsors of SAFE. Perhaps Committee Chairman, Sherrod Brown (D-OD), thinks he can garner more than 15 votes, and in the process get the illusive 60th vote for SAFE in the Senate (51 D&I plus 8 Republican sponsors)? Hence, all the delays?

Very Low 60s in the Senate May Be as Good as it Gets

The SAFE sponsors. In the House, as of 9/18/2023, the bill (HR 2891: SAFE Banking Act of 2023) has 71 sponsors, including 52 Democrats and 19 Republicans; the latter includes the Primary Sponsor, Rep David Joyce (R-OH). In the US Senate, there are there are 34 Senate Democrats and Independents (31+3) plus eight Republican Senators co-sponsoring the bill (seven, to be exact, as Steve Daines is the lead sponsor): Bill Cassidy (LA), Kevin Cramer (ND), Susan Collins (ME), Steve Daines (MT), Cynthia Lummis (WY), Lisa Murkowski (AK), Rand Paul (KY), and Dan Sullivan (AK).

Who could be that 9th Republican vote? It is widely assumed that all 51 Senate Democrats and Independents (48+1) will vote for SAFE (the risk is in the add-ons, but more on that later). There are 49 Republicans in the Senate, and we know eight support SAFE. Via a process of elimination, we try to determine the 60th vote(s) here,

 We would rule out the 7 Republicans that are on the record opposing the rescheduling of cannabis: Blackburn (TN), Budd, (NC), Cotton (AR), Crapo (ID), Mullin (OK), Risch (ID), and Rounds (SD). True, some could argue one thing does not imply the other, but we deem these Senators as "anti-cannabis" reform.

- So, besides the 8 Senate Republicans sponsoring or co-sponsoring SAFE, that leaves 34 potential Republicans to support SAFE.
- Progressivepunch.org (a left-wing outfit) gives a score of zero on its "progressive score on crucial votes" to a total of 28 Republicans: Barasso (WY), Blackburn (TN), Boozman (AR), Britt (AL), Budd (NC), Capito (WV), Cornyn (TX), Cotton (AR), Cramer (ND), Ernst (IA), Fischer (NE), Grassley (IA), Hagerty (TN), Hoeven (ND), Hyde-Smith (MS), Johnson (WI), Kennedy (LA), Lankford (OK), Lummis (WY), McConnell (KY), Ricketts (NE), Romney (UT), Rick Scott (FL), Tim Scott (SC), Thune (SD), Tuberville (AL), Wicker (MS), Young (IN). Can this be a "tell" on SAFE? Maybe not, as two of these Republicans are co-sponsors of SAFE (Cramer; Lummis)? But we would still not count on the rest (26 in total of which three are on the record against rescheduling: Blackburn, Budd, Cotton). Note: We do not expect Sen Tuberville to vote for SAFE, despite news flow on his potential vote being quoted as yes or no by various outlets at various times.
- So, that leaves 11 Republicans that could constitute the 60th vote for SAFE: Thom Tillis (NC, class II); JD Vance (OH, class III), Mike Braun (IN, I), Ted Cruz (TX, I), Lindsey Graham (SC, II); Josh Hawley (MO, I); Mike Lee (UT, III); Roger Marshall (KS, II); Jerry Moran (KS, III); Marco Rubio (FL, III); and Eric Schmitt (MO, III). Class I are those whose term expires in Jan'25. Mike Braun is running for Governor of Indiana, and his state has not legalized cannabis, so we would not count on him to vote for SAFE. We see Sens. Cruz and Rubio as too high profile to vote for SAFE (even though it is not supposed to be a "divisive partisan" issue). We consider Sen. Graham, a wild card on SAFE but would not count on him. That said, he has the 2nd highest progressive score (as per progressivepunch.org), second only to Sen Collins (Sen Murkowski is 3rd), among Republicans.
- Of the rest, Sens. Hawley, Lee, Marshall, Moran, Schmitt, Thillis, and Vance, we rule out the KS Senators (Marshall, Moran). Tillis and Vance are in the Senate Banking Committee, so if the mark-up vote (committee vote) takes place as scheduled on 9/27, we will know by then how both go on the record. If they vote no, then that would only leave the two MO Senators (Hawley, Schmitt) and Mike Lee, in our view. The latter is described as an economic and civil libertarian, so he could be that 60th vote. Maybe.
- But if we step back, and think big picture, we have a hard time believing reports from some quarters that SAFE could have over 70 votes in the Senate. We barely get to 60, or, at best, very low 60s.

Risks from the Side of Democrats

We see these as potential "derailing" risks,

- Last minute social equity add-ons. Last December, the final SAFE version only included two add-ons, HOPE (help for states to start a pardoning process) and GRAM (allowing MJ users to bear arms). We are not clear if any of these two add-ons made it to the version that the committee will vote.
- Risk that Senate Democrats lobby hard to get social equity into the final bill before the Senate vote, but after mark-up. But that would make the mark-up vote only posturing, so if we were to have additions, they should have been done during Committee. Right? Well, apparently, not necessarily, as plans to amend the legislation on the floor could still take place...
- We will not delve into the section 10 matter here, but we will keep an eye on whether the concerns of Sen Jack Reed (D-RI) were addressed in a manner that would not derail Republican support (from the 8 sponsors).

Bottomline: Again, big picture, all in, we would put the odds of successful passage of SAFE in the Senate at 50-60%. In the House via a must-pass bill this year-end? Only better slightly than 50%. Via a standalone route in the House next year? Less than 40%.
